MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director for Support

Jack:

Tom and I have read the attached and our comments relate to the marked items. It's a tough speech to write, but here are our comments for what they are worth:

A. I am not sure we have all that evidence on a classic espionage role for the Chinese; but I may well be out of date and if so stand corrected.

B. Slight change in emphasis.

C. Perhaps reference to liaison would be a bit more felicitous if there was no mention of any specific nationality.

D. It would seem a little hard to address an NSA audience without mention of Martin and Mitchell. In other words, their omission might seem a little contrived. I also wonder whether cases [redacted] are well enough known without some descriptive data.

E. I am not sure this list of cases is what makes the job of being a KGB officer easy; each one required pretty good professional effort. What is easy is the amount of highly sensitive information which lies around this country pretty much for free.

F. How about the Rosenbergs? Also, although perhaps I am wrong, I thought there was some element of ideological motivation with Martin and Mitchell. Also, if I read [redacted] right, one of our worries these days is motivation, even though it may not involve working for a foreign power.

G. As noted.

H. Somewhere here the President's concern should be tied directly with what he charged the DCI to do and what the latter has done.
